PLANTING GUIDE AND LANDSCAPE INFORMATION

Aloe barberae (Syn bainesii) or Tree Aloe- a stunning statement plan, a great example of when less is more. Looks awesome when young, and just continues to grow into a distinctly formed tree. One of the few Aloes, that can tolerate shaded, moist locations, and full sun. Great in the garden, planted against feature walls, or in pots.

Draceana draco - or Dragon tree- another cracker. Native to the Canary Islands, this plant is one of the most unique and striking feature trees. With its clear trunk, thick, strap-like blue-green foliage, this is a perfect choice if you are looking for a feature that can truly hold its own. Slow growing, but so hardy, this plant tolerates drought and exposed sites, again, perfect as a stand alone feature, or in pots.

Others

- Metrosideros thomasi- or New Zealand Christmas Bush- great evergreen shrub or small tree, perfect for coastal gardens. Grows to about 4-5 metres, but can be grown as a hedge and kept to 2-3 metres. Gorgeous red pom pom like flowers, which really stand out against the silvery grey coloured leaves. Extremely hardy once established, tolerates front line salt, responds well to pruning.

- Dianella prunina 'Utopia'
- Pennisetum advena 'Rubrum'
- Cupaniopsis anacardioides
- Pennisetum alopecuroides 'Nafray'
- Phormium tenax 'Chief'
- Lomandra longifolia 'Tanika'
- Nandina domestica 'Gulf Stream'
